TCV Goes Digital

Many of you have probably not heard yet that Tri-City Volunteers, Inc. has launched its new website. (photo on right) The address is www.Tri-CityVolunteers.org and it has already added a new and exciting boost to the publicity effort for the tremendous work our supporters help us do.

The web pages describe our services along with telling the stories of the people we serve. Please bookmark the site to stay in touch with new and exciting features such as an upcoming donations page where visitors will be able to make easy donations using their credit cards.

Also along with the website, TCV has purchased new software from Giftworks. This exciting new piece of programming will allow us to better manage our volunteers. For example the software enables us to assign tasks to volunteers, lets volunteers specify the tasks they'd like to do, and it keeps track of our High School volunteer service times. Now volunteers and TCV needs will be better and more efficiently matched. We will also be able to stay in better contact with our donors and supporters.

What does this mean to the people we serve? According to Bryan Bevers, Executive Director, "The new electronic tools will allow us to apply more of our time and energy to directly serving the needy in our community. These digital tools become a force multiplier in freeing us up to do what we do best, helping the hungry in our Tri-City area".

If you'd like to become a TCV volunteer or make a financial contribution, please contact us at the number below or visit the website to register to be one of our volunteers listed in our new database of volunteers.
